

3 PhD Fellowships in Byzantine Studies at Ghent University

The Department of Linguistics at Ghent University (Belgium) is seeking well-qualified applicants for 3 fully-funded and full-time doctoral research fellowships attached to the European Research Council Consolidator Grant project MELA. The meaning of language. A digital grammar of the Greek taught at schools in Late Constantinople. Prof. Dr. Andrea Cuomo, with his interest in the history of Medieval Greek and the reception of classical literature in Byzantium, is the principal investigator.

Within the ERC project, subprojects will be assigned to individual team members. For the current vacancies, these subprojects are situated in the following areas:

- Digital Humanities/ Greek Linguistics:
<https://career5.successfactors.eu/sfcareer/jobreqcareer?jobId=22265&company=C0000956575P>
- Medieval Greek Philology/ Byzantine Studies:
<https://career5.successfactors.eu/sfcareer/jobreqcareer?jobId=22355&company=C0000956575P>
- Greek Palaeography:
<https://career5.successfactors.eu/sfcareer/jobreqcareer?jobId=22364&company=C0000956575P>

INTERESTED?

Apply online through the e-recruitment system before the application deadline (April 23, 2022). We do NOT accept late applications or applications that are not submitted through the online system.

For more information about the vacancies, please contact Prof. Andrea Cuomo at:
Andrea.Cuomo@ugent.be